

VICTOR KISCH

Director

Victor Kisch joined the Vital Life Foundation Board in 2011, motivated to make a difference in the lives of those being served by the Foundation. Of his work on the Foundation Board he says, “I look forward to learning more about so many different worthy causes. As a small foundation with limited resources, I want to be part of deciding how to allocate resources to make the greatest impact for those we serve.”

Victor graduated from Temple University’s James E. Beasley’s School of Law, after receiving his Bachelor’s degree from the University of Iowa and his Master’s from the University of Illinois. He now resides in Portland and is a partner at the largest law firm in Oregon, Stoel Rives LLP, where he specializes in labor and employment law on behalf of employers.

Victor is a prolific writer and a frequent speaker in Oregon and nationally. He blogs at www.stoelrivesworldofemployment.com and for five years wrote a monthly column for the Portland Business Journal. He has been quoted by the Associated Press and has appeared as a TV commentator at all Portland affiliates. He has been ranked as a first-tier labor and employment lawyer by Chambers USA, and has been included as a Super Lawyer since its inception.

Among his efforts to support laudable charitable organizations, Victor has served in several positions on the Lan Su Chinese Garden Board and actively supports organizations such as Friends of the Children, a VLF partner charity. His skills, experience, and dedication make Victor a vital resource as VLF expands its ability to serve our friends and neighbors.
