

JOHANNAH SENN

Executive Director

Johannah Senn serves as the Executive Director of the Vital Life Foundation and the Director of Intentional Culture at Consonus and Marquis Companies. Through her work, she dedicates herself to enriching the lives of seniors and staff who serve them.

Her journey in senior care began in 2013 as an occupational therapist. Johannah earned her bachelor's degree in Exercise Science and Human Physiology and a master's degree in occupational therapy from Pacific University. She was immediately drawn to the organization's commitment to fostering a culture of meaningful engagement and purpose.

As she transitioned into her leadership role, the ten years of patient centered care, Johannah's dedication shined bright. Johannah has been the driving force behind transformative programs like New Chapters and Spirit of '45, which continue to create extraordinary experience for seniors and staff.

Inspired by her close bond with her grandparents, both Chinese immigrants who worked at Pearl Harbor during World War II—Johannah honors their legacy by championing programs that connect and celebrate veterans and seniors. Johannah's family taught her the value of meaningful relationships, which she now strives to cultivate intentionally for those she supports, with engaging events like Spirit of '45 and Journey of Heroes.

The foundation has created remarkable experiences for seniors and staff with her guidance. Her efforts have raised funds for an array of initiatives, expanding its positive impact. Her healthcare expertise, coupled with her empathy and determination, shapes her belief that seniors should be celebrated as whole individuals with enduring purpose and potential. Her work demonstrates her belief that every senior's life story deserves to be honored while they continue experiencing new chapters.

Johannah embraces life's adventures outside of work with her husband, enjoying seasonal outdoor activities from summer boating to winter crabbing, improving her golf game, and gardening. The future looks bright with Johannah Senn.
